No special effects, no cheating with computers — just two skilled pilots taking a hangar in spectacular fashion

First, some numbers: Paul Bonhomme and his wingman of 17 years Steve Jones flew through this hangar in Wales at 300kmh in their Xtreme Air Sbach XA41 planes — just one metre off the ground. They also repeated the feat

11 times, only stopping when Bonhomme felt he was becoming far too relaxed. He reckons driving down a road's more dangerous than this: "If we're not in control for some reason, then we'll stop doing it."

Enormous cave in Bulgaria swallows thrillseeking bungee jumpers whole

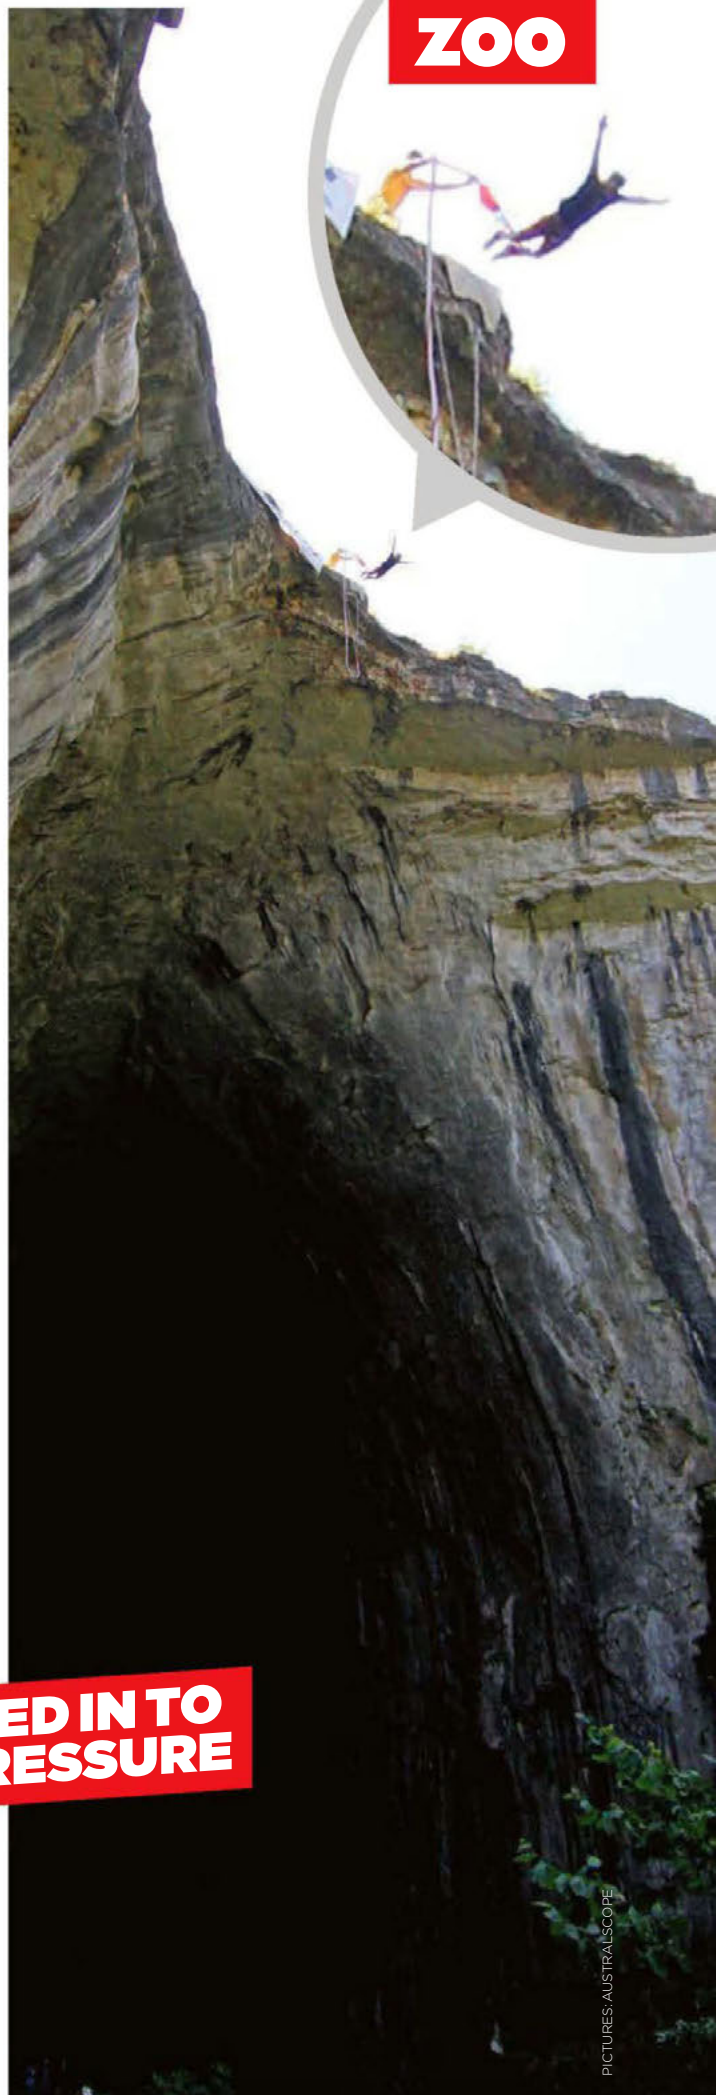

Neolithic Man used to live in the Prohodna Cave, Bulgaria, though he probably called it the “grunt grunt grunt” and didn’t know how much fun bungee jumping into its depths was. Nowadays the location’s famous throughout Bulgaria for the extreme sport, and for being the longest cave in the nation: 365 metres. Many of the country’s famous movies were filmed here, to which ZOO says: there are famous Bulgarian movies?

Alexandra Lillian and Brianna Lee Pike recreate the sexiest characters on PS4 and Xbox One

ASSASSIN'S CREED SYNDICATE

➡ No need to watch your back like it's a prison shower — Alex's stealthy assassin can take us out any day.

DEAD OR ALIVE 5
LAST ROUND

➤ Memo to the makers of Dead or Alive: when you do the next one, model the fighters on Alex and Brianna!

BATMAN

ARKHAM KNIGHT

➤ The Joker's girlfriend, Harley Quinn, is the battiest babe in Gotham. But now that he's KIA, she's single.

ALEXANDRA LILLIAN

When's the last time you played a video game?

Um... probably about six months ago. It's a bit embarrassing, but I think it was Harry Potter. I used to be into games — I used to really like the fighting ones, like Dead or Alive, which is the one Brianna and I did in bikinis for the shoot. Otherwise, I was into Harry Potter and Shrek.

What's your gaming knowledge like on a scale of one to 10: one being no idea, 10 being you know as much as Sheldon from The Big Bang Theory?

A three or a four. It depends on what sort of game you're talking about. If it's Harry Potter or Shrek, I'm an expert. Ask me anything.

Which of the hot outfits from the shoot was your favourite, and why?

Mad Max! I loved that one! The purple one I wore was definitely different, too. I felt like I was going to a fetish nightclub!

Is there anything sexy about a guy who's really into video games?

I don't have anything against it, unless he's an addict. I'd stay away from them. There's something attractive about girls playing games, too.

We're all familiar with strip poker. Would you ever play strip Mortal Kombat with a guy?

Yeah, definitely! That would make it way more fun! You're giving me ideas for my weekend!

BRIANNA LEE PIKE

When's the last time you played a video game?

It's been a while! I think the last video game I played was GTA with my brothers.

What's your gaming knowledge like on a scale of one to 10: one being no idea, 10 being you know as much as Sheldon from The Big Bang Theory?

I actually prefer to watch people play video games than play them myself, so I've learn a bit from that. Having six brothers also helps! I would say my knowledge would be about a five.

Which of the hot outfits from the shoot was your favourite, and why?

I loved the Harley Quinn outfit. It was a little bit crazy, plus I got to use a baseball bat as a prop!

Is there anything sexy about a guy who's really into video games?

Sure, as long as they aren't totally obsessed with them! [Laughs]

We're all familiar with strip poker. Would you ever play strip Mortal Kombat with a guy?

Definitely not! I know I'm terrible at video games so it would just end with me taking all my clothes off! [Laughs]

World's first Monster Truck FRONT FLIP!

Eleven-time world champ breaks the laws of physics in his 1500-horsepower beast, but gets ripped off by the Guinness Book

T Tom Meents' joy must have been short-lived when he did the seemingly impossible and front-flipped his Monster Truck a few days ago. Sure, the Yank legend pulled off a world first and drove every redneck in America insane, but soon after he got some bad news: the Guinness Book of World Records had told him to bugger off and try again.

While everyone in the 50,000 crowd and millions more watching at home were sure he'd created Monster Jam history, the Guinness brainiacs ruled him out on a technicality. Watch the video and you'll see that the truck's front tyres don't hit the ground at the end of the first rotation. That's why it isn't an official world record. To which we say "Bullshit!"

Pretty much everything else about the jump went off brilliantly. Meents and his team had to construct a special 88-degree kicker ramp to make his ride flip to the front, and he had to have its massive V8 engine running at 6200RPM on the 76-metre approach. Tom nailed it, sending the spectators at New Jersey's MetLife Stadium into a weird sort of collective orgasm.

Meents also just became the first bloke to have landed a double backflip in a Monster Truck. He'd obviously been getting some tips from Aussie politicians. They do double backflips all the bloody time.

HE'LL BE BACK!

Arnold Schwarzenegger returns as everyone's favourite killer cyborg in the highly anticipated Terminator Genisys

"FOR ME, PLAYING THE TERMINATOR IS LIKE RIDING A BIKE"

G'day, Arnie. What got you so pumped about returning to the Terminator series?

I got excited as soon as I read the first draft of the script, which was way before anyone was yet hired. And I was very happy about the fact that they paid a lot of attention to the storyline and the characters. To me, this was the most important factor in why I wanted to be a part of Terminator Genisys. Also, who they wanted to hire to play the other characters: they really went after great actors, great performers.

You and Emilia Clarke from Game of Thrones look like you really hit it off!

I remember when we did the first table read. Emilia was sitting next to me and for the first five minutes we didn't talk about the script, we only talked about clothes and shops we liked. It was funny. But then we got going with the reading and got into it. And it read so well. I mean, like within two and half or three hours we read through the entire script, and people laughed at the right places, and it was very intense in other places and so on. It was really terrific.

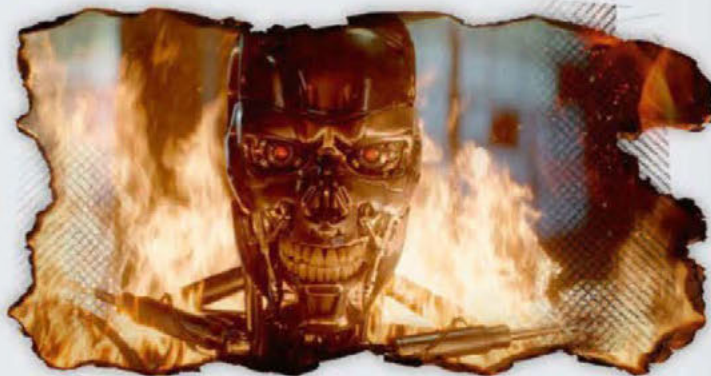

How do you think your co-stars, including Aussies Jason Clarke and Jai Courtney, did with all the action scenes?

Amazing, because they really got into it. We had great stunt people there that mapped out the fight scenes well, but the key thing is again to be into it, to be inside the fight. I think what was so appealing about working with this cast is their commitment. I talked to Alan Taylor, our director, and said, "Have you ever thought, we've been shooting now for at least three months, and not one actor has ever complained that they're sore, or they're injured, or they're tired, or they can't do this and that?" It really just says a lot for you guys.

Yeah, we breed 'em tough down here. Was it strange at all coming back to this role?

No, it's like riding a bicycle — you fall right back into it. I remember when I read the script and started practising the lines, I started talking like a machine again. It was kind of like you slip into that character, and the only thing you have to be careful about is do you play the Terminator, or do you play the Protector, or do you play the Protector and therefore you're also the Terminator because you protect? Like in this case I protect Sarah Connor, but anything that is coming close to her, or is threatening her, I terminate.

Did you revisit the previous Terminator films before you began working on this one?

Yeah, I did. I think for the other actors, they had a little more freedom to interpret their characters. They weren't locked into performances by previous actors, because the timelines and situations for their characters here are different ... I didn't play a different Terminator or anything like that.

Why do you think the Terminator character is so popular with so many people?

What some people have said to me about why they enjoyed the Terminator character is because he is a machine. He looks like a human being but he's a machine, and therefore he's indestructible. And so people like that because everyone wants to be like that. And then they feel like there's really no limit to what power he has. That he can destroy anything in front of him, eliminate anything in the way. But... at the same time you don't have to be responsible for anything because you're a machine. For instance, in the first Terminator I destroy an entire police station. Normally people would say that's not a good example or very inspirational or something like that. But even when we had a special screening for the police force, the officers were cheering when I was wiping out the police station. Why? Because it was not a human being doing it, it was a machine. The way Jim Cameron wrote it, and the way he filmed it was the character, even though he was a villain in the first, became heroic. And so I think that's what people enjoy; that he can be this kind of evil, but at the same time be a good person, or be a good machine.

26-tonne car-crushing robot is armed to the teeth

 This must be where the Transformers come for a happy ending. Artist Christian Ristow built the Hand of Man, an 8m-long interactive hydraulic steel sculpture controlled via a glove, after realising that smashing stuff up in a relatively safe environment for shits and giggles was fun.

"I wanted to share that, to give that feeling, that sensation, that experience of power and control," he said. "Grandmothers, children, heavy-equipment operators, anyone who wants to stick their hand inside this control glove and for about five minutes [can] have this experience of destroying a car."

Movements made inside the control glove are transmitted to the giant hand, so anyone can pretend to be Megatron and smash up some old shitbox motor.

Unsurprisingly the robot's been a massive hit at festivals like Burning Man, because nothing says happy days like a fistful of psychedelic drugs and a car-crushing robot.

"It's very, very rare to have someone who doesn't crack a big smile when they're running this thing," added Ristow. "It just makes people happy."

Throne!

7 This dildo-plastered take on Game of Thrones' Iron Throne is sporting more dicks than a federal cabinet meeting — and one very careful owner.

English writer Ralph Jones was delighted to win the prize from an adult toy retailer, but soon realised the 182x120x107cm penis-tastic seat was too big to fit through the door of his unit or office. Not to mention the HR complaints that would've followed like a lawyer chasing an ambulance.

"It's the size of a small horse!" he said, just while we're on the subject of large love muscles.

Not wanting to turn down the prize, he hired a garage — the only place with enough width to accommodate the multiple-dildoed chair — and told the owner he'd won "a kind of erotic throne".

The thrill of paying to keep a dildo throne in storage for the rest of his life wore off surprisingly quickly, and he's put it up on eBay and is waiting for the world to beat his door off, whichever comes first.

"If you run a sex festival, sex club, or if you've just been feeling like there was a dildo-throne-shaped hole in your life, why not grab this unique opportunity with both hands?" asks Jones.

The condition's described as "used" — ewww! Let's just say interest has been slow so far.

Roadwork DONE RIGHT!

Who says TV can't fill a hole in your life? Not the Romanians!

 You've got to hand it to Romania's road maintenance crews: they've found a way to fill the country's huge potholes and recycle their crappy old televisions.

That huge, ancient, cathode-ray idiot box is doing a great job of patching up a piece of tarmac that would otherwise be dangerous enough to rip the rear axle off a road train. Seriously, if it had filled up with water it would've been Romania's first in-ground swimming pool.

Because these old tellys contain a shedload of lead and other crap that's bad for people, the US Environmental Protection Agency has listed them as "hazardous household waste". So good on our Eastern European friends for disposing of them safely in a place where they're guaranteed to be repeatedly run over by heavy vehicles.

Then again, maybe we've got this arse-backwards and this is just a photo of what happens when someone in Bucharest cracks the shits after watching the last episode of this season's Game of Thrones.

Ford's Porsche KILLER

The Blue Oval's Aussie-designed GT race car is out to beat the world's best next year

 Henry Ford II (the sequel) took on Ferrari at Le Mans 1966 — and his GT40 race car won, the first US marque to do so there. Actually, his GT40s placed 1-2-3 in one of the great racing upsets, and won the race in the next three years. Fifty years on, Ford will return to the 24-hour race in 2016 with their new racer, based on the Todd Willing-designed supercar. What do we know of the innards? Well, it's running the new EcoBoost, which is a turbo 3.5L V6. But Ford don't think two less cylinders will hurt its chances, with the production model — also released next year — knocking out over 440kW. The race car will debut at the Daytona 24-hour enduro and run in the FIA's World Endurance Championship. Bugger that... we want to see one in V8 Supercars!

JACQUES the RIPPER

ZOO's stand-up comedian heckles life every week

THE SCIENCE OF SEXISM

Controversy has arisen recently following a poorly received joke by a knighted 72-year-old Nobel laureate scientist. Sir Tim Hunt suggested that male and female scientists should work separately, saying: "Three things happen when they are in the lab: you fall in love with them, they fall in love with you, and when you criticise them they cry."

It was an aside, a joke, based on some observable truth, but the online backlash is next-level overreaction.

Obviously, people who work together often have sexual chemistry and shit can get a little complicated. Hunt was forced to resign because of the sheer weight of the backlash, and the popularity of the hashtag #distractinglysexy sealed his fate.

Female scientists posted photos of them in their unsexy lab coats. I'm sure they'd scrub up pretty good, but they're a pack of bridge trolls in their hazmat suits, which is the point they're trying to make. But I have some problems with all this. Female empowerment is striving for women to be seen as more than just sexual objects, yet these scientists go right ahead and objectify themselves to validate their message.

What's more disturbing for me is that even though these women are scientists, they fail to acknowledge the role pheromones play in attraction. Humans decipher scents and create sexual chemistry irrespective of the 18 layers of clothing and nine masks we may be wearing. If those pheromones match up, other juices will flow. I'm an idiot who tells dick jokes for a living — how do I know this and these scientists don't?

When a sexually viable female is giving off her scent, a man's testosterone levels rise by up to 80 per cent. We're simple creatures but there still needs to be some basic understanding of how we work. When women aren't around, men are crushing it: rockets, television, air travel, the internet... all man-made. But you introduce women into the mix and we clearly go downhill. Best example I can think of is the Challenger, NASA's second shuttle to launch with a female astronaut. It exploded just after take-off because she probably reached up to turn a dial, her G-string popped into view, all the dudes got instantly dumb and the rocket exploded because it collided with air.

THE BEST GAMES OF E3 2015!

ALL THE HIGHLIGHTS—AND A FEW LOWLIGHTS
—FROM THE WORLD'S BIGGEST GAMER SHOW

◉ GIGANTIC

Choose your hero from many quirky characters in a highly animated multiplayer online battle arena (MOBA).

◉ SEA OF THIEVES

A massive online swashbuckling first-person pirate game full of seafaring, ship battles and treasure hunting. Garrrr!

◉ NO MAN'S SKY

Venture into deepest space in a limitless galaxy, then find and claim an undiscovered planet and name it something awesome like "Bloodfart World".

◉ METAL GEAR SOLID V: THE PHANTOM PAIN

The one-eyed mullet man and king of stealth returns this time to an epic setting, merging quirky comedic takedowns with super-disturbing themes.

◉ DOOM

We've waited a HELL of a long time, but the classic first-person shooter is back, and boy is it gory! Blast away all the classic aliens and demons with all the old-school weapons we remember, like the super shotgun, BFG and chainsaw. All the pieces of the original two Doom games (on PC) are there, but with violence that makes a grindhouse horror film look like Playschool. Approaching enemies up close, you can snap jawbones, rip out hearts and split heads apart. It's not for the squeamish, but it will definitely kick arse.

◉ HITMAN

Big, bald goon Agent 47 is back to take on contracts and devise new and creative ways to eliminate his targets. The more subtle and creative you are, the better your rewards.

◉ MAD MAX

As if we didn't want the Rockatansky game badly enough, the Fury Road film landed and was so incredible we'd now sell one of our mum's kidneys to get our hands on this. No, wait — make that both her kidneys.

◉ FINAL FANTASY VII REMAKE

The beloved PS One JRPG that started the phenomenon is being completely remade from scratch, making fans lose their shit.

◉ GEARS OF WAR 4

Gears is back with more Lancer chainsaw action for the first time on current-gen consoles. This third-person shooter will be a sequel to Gears of War 3, but star two entirely new protagonists. In the gameplay demo we saw, the vibe returns to the scarier atmosphere of the original game, with creatures running in shadows, wild weather that devastates your path and sharp-toothed beasts with multi-tentacle tongues. The destruction looks insane and combat is more gut-wrenchingly brutal than ever!

◉ MASS EFFECT: ANDROMEDA

The finest sci-fi trilogy of our era has a sequel in the works, but little is known about it. A fresh trailer revealed a variety of new planets to explore, the return of the Mako vehicle (yep, that planet-roaming buggy tank) and jetpack armour. It doesn't look much like its predecessors, but hopefully won't stray too far from the things that made it awesome, like RPG mechanics and lesbian alien sex scenes.

HALO 5: GUARDIANS

A platoon of clone dudes in hard helmets blast lasers at silly little aliens like it's an amusement park shooting gallery.

FORZA MOTORSPORT 6

Fancy vehicles shine and sparkle on screen for another consecutive year, this time starring the new Ford GT. If it was any more realistic, we'd be able to smell the petrol fumes.

Emily Kaldwin is the surprise new protagonist in the series

DISHONORED 2

You can now play as a guy or gal assassin in this stealthy first-person sequel, featuring that old-school London-esque vibe with lots of pompous dudes with twirly mos, monocles and top hats. Your sneaky character will have plenty of tools and talents, like dark vision to slow down time, a dark grapple to pull you across distances quickly or evaporate into a dark smoke for short bursts of time. Weapons include knives and hand crossbows, as well as grenades that are great for dismantling mechanical monstrosities.

DARK SOULS 3

It doesn't seem to matter how many controllers are broken in the process, we will devote our souls to seeing this addictive game through. Feel the struggle for survival as your lowly peasant guy grinds his way to become a powerful warrior, but not without many, many deaths in between. The level designs will be more interconnected, like the first game, and the already stellar combat will be further refined to make every weapon, armour and spell a play style to consider. Bring on the pain!

RECORE

A wicked-looking action-adventure game featuring a slick wastelander chick in a post-apocalyptic desert setting. Evil robots with red energy cores are running wild trying to kill her, but a dog-like robot sidekick with a blue energy core comes to the rescue. The blue core can be transferred to different robots to make them fight by her side.

CONSOLE WARS!

The three major console developers — Microsoft, Sony and Nintendo — went at it hardcore during their pre-show press conferences. All sides went for a major push on gaming itself, presenting their large range of upcoming titles they were working on. The big story this year? Virtual reality! Both Microsoft and Sony updated their futuristic devices, generating a sea of "ooohs" and "aaahs" from the media crowds. And Nintendo? They went with a puppet show.

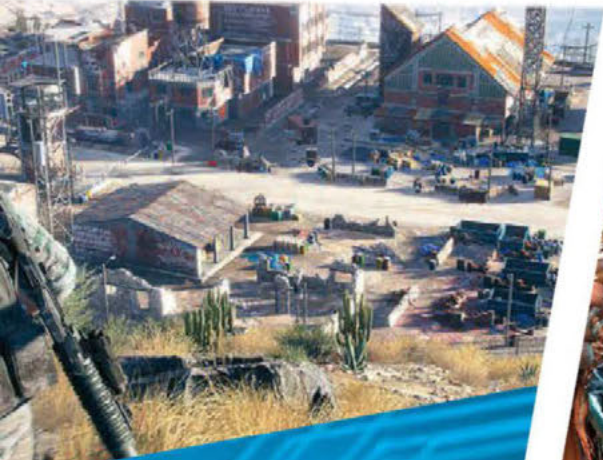

XBOX HOLOLENS

This pair of smart glasses looks ungodly in public, but at home is a cool wireless computer you wear like a visor. It uses sensors and a 3D optical display that you interact with through gazing, voice and hand gestures. A presenter demonstrated the tech live on the game Minecraft using voice and gestures to interact with a full 3D world that appeared on his table. He could play the game this way.

SURPRISE NEWS

Xbox One will have backwards compatibility, meaning we will all be able to play our old Xbox 360 games on the new console. Over 100 working Xbox 360 titles will be ready to play this summer, with hundreds more to come. Pre-purchased Xbox 360 retail and digital games will be playable on the Xbox One at no extra charge, and developers only have to approve their titles for it to be available on the system. Sweet!

🕒 GHOST RECON: WILDLANDS

The Ghosts' elite special forces team goes behind enemy lines in Bolivia, which hosts the largest coke producer in the world: the Santa Blanca Drug Cartel. It's a massive open world where you can play solo or co-op in groups of four, smashing the massive drug trafficking ring one location at a time. Go in loud, stealthy or use advanced tech like drones. Sick!

🕒 HORIZON: ZERO DAWN

Like Monster Hunter (but not weirdly bonkers), this post-apocalyptic adventure takes us many years into the future, where humanity is overrun by giant dinosaur-like robots and humans have formed tribes. The star of the show is a chick who looks like the carrot top from Game of Thrones ("You know nothing, Jon Snow"). She hunts the robo-saurs with futuristic spears and bows, and the graphics are something special.

🕒 FALLOUT 4

One of the most-wanted sequels in a long time, this post-apocalyptic open-world game gives you unlimited choices and actions, meshed with an intense story, feisty action and deep RPG elements. The game begins before the H-bombs go off, as you create the choices that ultimately shape your character. Years after the bombs drop, you leave the safety of the vault for the open world of mutants and radiation. You can craft your gear, weapons and armour using all materials you find.

PLAYSTATION PROJECT MORPHEUS

This virtual reality headset will work with the PS4 and PS Vita, and it looks like something from Tron. There was no live demonstration at the conference but we could try it at the expo and there were many games in the works, like Playroom VR, The London Heist, Eve Valkyrie, Dreams, Battlezone, Harmonix Music VR, Wayward Sky, Headmaster and Godling. The coolest-looking VR title could be RIGS, an online multiplayer mech battle arena where all players have to wear Project Morpheus headgear like it's a trippy Daft Punk fan-club gathering.

NEW CONTROLLERS

Both Sony and Microsoft have fancy new game controllers in the works. Sony revealed the DualShock 4 20th Anniversary Edition, a PS4 controller that commemorates the launch of the original PlayStation One console 20 years ago, with familiar grey colours and original PS logo. Xbox revealed the Elite Wireless Controller, which is like a Swiss Army Knife, with interchangeable parts, grips, extra precision and trigger button locks.

DEUS EX: MANKIND DIVIDED

The first-person sci-fi title returns loaded with game-altering options. Approach any situation using combat, stealth or diplomacy — to name a few. Set two years after the events of Human Revolution, the community is in a rift between humans and augments (basically people 'roided up on cyborg enhancements). As Adam Jensen, you are now part of a new elite organisation, and your own augments can be upgraded to enhance your bad-arse cyborg skill sets.

BATTLEBORN

Champions from every planet across the galaxy have converged to fight for the last remaining star in the universe. With 25 crazy characters to choose from in this action-packed first-person shooter, you can jump into five-versus-five online multiplayer battles, or engage alone or co-operatively in the story mode. Fail and your species is dead!

MIRROR'S EDGE: CATALYST

Faith is a mega-babe in the latest parkour-centric first-person game. As the nimble-footed chick, you'll pounce across buildings and sprint along walls. She's a modern-day hippie with the gnarliness to take on evil government corporations with mad martial arts skills. Best of all, it's open-world. Hectic.

STAR WARS: BATTLEFRONT

Our inner nerd stood to attention when the latest gameplay was revealed for this much-wanted first-person shooter. It's our childhood Star Wars fantasies recreated in mind-blowing detail in Battlefield environments. We could join great online rumbles on the snow planet Hoth with first-person gunplay, giant Empire AT-ATs, rebel snow speeders and Tauntauns. All the nostalgic sights and sounds will bring on a million nerdgasms.

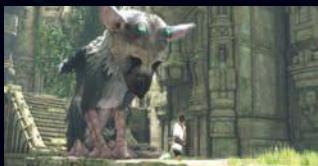

RISE OF THE TOMB RAIDER

In the heart-pounding gameplay demo, Lara Croft's greatest adversary was the icy elements, with an ice-wall climbing expedition ending in avalanches and crumbling ledges. It looks freakin' amazing! Pity the freezing weather has the boobacious Croft covered in rugs — we suggest a hot "beach" theme for the sequel.

GET THE APP!

THE LAST GUARDIAN

A boy and his giant feathered dog-thing have to get through an isolated and dangerous area. It's been a long time coming and it looks like it'll be worth the wait.

NIER (NEW PROJECT)

With three new characters including a hot, blade-wielding chick, the sequel to the underrated action RPG is ripe with dream-like oddities and haunting weirdness.

XCOM 2

The coolest strategy game in recent memory is back for a sequel. This time the aliens have enslaved Earth, and your rebellion must fight your way out of it — one turn at a time.

GODZILLA

All the classic giant monsters from the retro films are here to punch on with Godzilla and destroy a city or two in the process. If you're after destruction on a massive scale, you won't do much better.

STREET FIGHTER V

Ha-doo-ken! Pushing the visual style of the previous game, this sharp-looking sequel has more colours, lights and flashes than a rave club on LSD. Ryu, Cammy, Nash, M. Bison, Chun Li and Birdie are currently confirmed.

FOR HONOUR

Enter an epic battlefield as one of three great warrior types: Knight, Viking or Samurai. Each player has their own group of troops that charge into battle. We got to see multiplayer Dominion mode in action, which involved four players in two teams striving to control three different control points within some castle walls. You can slaughter through hordes of pawns, or use the Art of Battle mode for refined combat controls against tougher opponents.

Nathan Drake lassos a crane and flies alongside a bridge in some specco graphics

UNCHARTED 4: A THIEF'S END

Nathan Drake and his old pal Sully were back for more Indiana Jones-like adventures in the brand new gameplay demo we saw. The two were heading down the winding streets of a coastal city before getting ambushed by armed militants. The pair used a mix of cover-based shooting, fist-fighting, flanking and climbing to evade the hot pursuit of attackers. But it takes some shifty driving skills in a hijacked jeep to evade the firepower from an armoured vehicle on your tail. It's action-packed chaos at its finest!

INDIE WATCH!

Keep an eye out: these under-the-radar titles are coming to consoles soon...

ASHEN

A fascinating world turned to ash with greyness galore and wicked fog beasts.

BLUES AND BULLETS

A black-and-white Mafia story of Elliot Ness and Al Capone, featuring crime solving and cover-based shooting.

CUPHEAD

A 2D platformer based on 1930s cartoons — screen filter and all!

RAGING JUSTICE

It's just like the classic brawler Streets of Rage reimagined for modern devices.

EITR

If Dark Souls was a 2D, pixel-heavy game, this would be it. What they achieve with limited resources is impressive.

NEED FOR SPEED

The street-racing game is back, and it resembles Fast and Furious more than ever before. The E3 footage showed off how far you can take car customisation before you start night-time drifting like you're getting away from a bank robbery.

RAINBOW SIX: SIEGE

Special ops take on terrorists in this multiplayer-focused first-person shooter. One side must breach the building while the other side defends it.

JUST CAUSE 3

Rico Rodriguez is back, this time in the Mediterranean. Parachute in, use multiple grapples, fly around in a wingsuit and blow up the outside world. The more explosions, the better!

THE DIVISION

A team-based shooter, much like Michael Bay's idea of an MMO, with an open-world community trying to survive the clean-up process in a disease-ridden city.

THE WALKING DEAD: MICHONNE

Placing season three of the much-loved video games on hold, this mini-series tells the untold story of Rick Grimes' companion from the graphic novels. Where did she go? Now we'll find out.

FATAL FRAME: MAIDEN OF BLACK WATER

If you're looking for a legit survival-horror game, ditch the pretenders and get the Wii U rollin'. This latest sequel to the long-gone PS2 trilogy not only looks great but promises serious shivers, starring a hot Asian babe and piss-scary ghosts. Only your flash photo camera can view the dead and eviscerate them.

HELLBLADE

Like Tomb Raider mixed with Dark Souls, this hellish and creepy action game stars a Celtic tribal babe losing her mind and dealing with her demons. Her fight against the invaders is seen through her eyes. The monsters are horrifying and every battle is brutal!

SOUTH PARK: THE FRACTURED BUT WHOLE

The funniest video game ever is back for a sequel, and if the reveal trailer was anything to go by, there might be some yellow-stained jocks when the game releases next year. The kids of South Park have changed games, from the World of Warcraft RPG to Coon and Friends superheroes, seen in the South Park TV episode. Should cause some uncontrollable ROFLs.

The boys return in another RPG... with help from a seriously wasted Towelie

CALL OF DUTY: BLACK OPS 3

Your marines are so advanced now, they're like half-robot supersoldiers. The Exo zombies portion of the game is leading the charge these days. Call of Zombies?

TRANSFORMERS: DEVASTATION

It plays faster and looks like the original '80s TV series, polished with comic-book flair. Hopefully Optimus Prime and Bumblebee aren't the only playable characters.

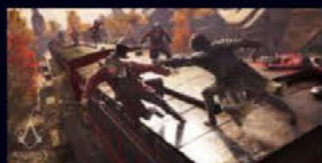

GUITAR HERO: LIVE

A new style of guitar gives the once-popular music game a much-needed kick up the arse. You'll be shredding riffs in front of a live crowd in no time.

STAR FOX ZERO

So Nintendo recycled another game from yesteryear to headline their E3 presentation... but hey, at least it's not another Mario. Join Fox and fellow animal pilots in upgraded Arwings that transform to suit your terrain.

ASSASSIN'S CREED: SYNDICATE

Set in 1868 London at the end of the Industrial Revolution, the new plot follows twins Jacob and Evie Frye at a time when gang warfare ruled.

ZOO E3 AWARDS

"HOOK IT TO MY VEINS" AWARD STAR WARS BATTLEFRONT

The Battle of Hoth gameplay was simply mindblowing — epic nostalgia. The sights and sounds were nailed and we can't wait to jump into those vehicles and change Star Wars lore.

"PLEASANT SURPRISE" AWARD FATAL FRAME: MAIDEN OF BLACK WATER

It's the kind of title we've been hoping to see Nintendo go for since the launch of the Wii U.

"DEMO DOWNER" AWARD CALL OF DUTY BLACK OPS 3

It's too early to naysay, but the generic gameplay demo was the same ol' COD in a very thin veil.

"HYPE MACHINE" AWARD HALO 5: GUARDIANS

The time and money that goes into this FPS is criminal, and the speeches are like getting force-fed food that makes you gag.

"HOLD ON TO YOUR SEATS" AWARD RISE OF THE TOMB RAIDER

Seat-gripping scenes had us on the edge until the demo was over. How will our sweaty palms hold that controller?

"PORTABLE PLEASURES" AWARD FIRE EMBLEM: FATES

Written off by many as "just another JRPG", the previous Nintendo 3DS title turned out to be a bona-fide hit.

"BLAST FROM THE PAST" AWARD RARE REPLAY

Game development company Rare has re-formed, releasing a 30-game disc of classics like Battletoads and Perfect Dark Zero.

"THIS TRAILER ROCKS!" AWARD MIRROR'S EDGE - CATALYST

It was a tough choice, but Faith's sexy parkouring and slick enemy takedowns in a futuristic utopia were hard to beat.

"THIS TRAILER SUCKS" AWARD MASS EFFECT: ANDROMEDA

WTF was this? Under no circumstances do you ever do Titanfall jet-pack combat in a Mass Effect game, or use Johnny Cash music.

"ARE WE THERE YET?" AWARD TOM CLANCY'S THE DIVISION

It looks cool, but maybe it's time to hold off the reveals until closer to the release date. The long wait is having a buzzkill effect.

"BACK TOO SOON?" AWARD NEED FOR SPEED

We've loved this series on and off in the past, and as great as the streets look, is only a year off is enough time to rejuvenate interest?

WTF

CHANCES!?

ZOO investigates the world's weirdest, spookiest and most bullshit coincidences!

WTC WTFS

Like the Titanic, the destruction of the World Trade Center was said to be "unthinkable". Except that a very similar scenario had already been broadcast on TV on March 4, 2001. The first episode of X-Files spin-off series The Lone Gunmen featured a commercial jet plane hijacked by terrorists using remote control and put on a collision course with... the World Trade Center. But if you think that's weird, 9/11 coincidences can also be found in a 1997 episode of The Simpsons when Bart spies a New York brochure that uses the WTC's outline to spell out the prophetic date, and in The Big Lebowski, when The Dude signs a cheque on September 11 — just as President Bush Snr is talking about going to war in Iraq on TV! Meanwhile, the 2000 video game Deus Ex came with a big blooper: they'd forgotten to add the WTC to the Manhattan skyline, which was explained as being the result of... a terrorist attack.

BOOK PREDICTS TITANIC SINKING

The Titanic sank in the early hours of April 15, 1912. Over 1500 passengers and crew died, many because it wasn't equipped with sufficient lifeboats. The supposedly unsinkable unthinkable had happened — and it had all been predicted in eerie detail in a novel called Futility published 14 years earlier! Author Morgan

Robertson dreamed up the world's biggest ocean liner, called it Titan, labelled it unsinkable, gave it nearly identical measurements and speed capabilities as its later real-life counterpart, and sent it off across the North Atlantic... in mid-April... where it hit an iceberg and sank... with most of its 2500 passengers dying...

because there weren't enough lifeboats. Even weirder, when Futility was republished in 1914, it included the short story Beyond the Spectrum, about a future war that starts with a sneak Japanese attack on the US fleet in the Pacific and ends with the Americans using a nuke-like weapon against their enemy.

PATTY'S PREDICTIVE PORN PAPERBACK

Patricia Hearst was the uni student daughter of a famous millionaire who, in 1974, was kidnapped by a radical terrorist group called the Symbionese Liberation Army. Brainwashed, Patty became a fully-fledged member of the SLA. Amazingly, the entire scenario had already played out 1972 porno novel Black Abductor, which was about a rich daughter named Patricia who was abducted in almost identical circumstances and sexually initiated into becoming part of the terror group. There were so many similarities the FBI actually investigated the author.

CHRISTIE ALMIGHTY!

Don't Look Now is a waaay freaky 1973 horror film starring Donald Sutherland and Julie Christie as parents who are haunted by the ghost of their young daughter after she drowns in a shallow pond at their farm. But a horrific coincidence was to derail Christie's career for decades. In 1979, the actress came back to her Wales farmhouse to find her friends and live-in caretakers frantically searching for their 22-month-old son, Harry. The boy was found drowned in the pond. Christie was for years haunted by the similarities between reel and real life and became a recluse.

CATCH A FALLING BABY — TWICE!

In 1937, Detroit streetsweeper Joseph Figlock was working in a city alley when he was hit by a baby that had fallen from a fourth-storey window. While Figlock was injured, the sprog's life was saved by him inadvertently breaking its fall. But the truly amazing bit happened a year later when Figlock was sweeping a different Detroit alley — and was hit by a different baby who'd fallen from a different fourth-floor window. Both janitor and junior survived.

EVEN HANNIBAL FINDS IT HARD TO SWALLOW

Twenty years before he became a household name as Hannibal Lecter in The Silence of the Lambs, Anthony Hopkins landed a supporting role in a film called The Girl From Petrovka. He tried to track down the novel of the same name by George Feifer. He found a book left on a train station bench and incredibly, it was the novel he'd been searching for, complete with handwritten notes in the margins. Fast forward two years to the film's Vienna location: Hopkins received a visit from Feifer, who confessed he didn't actually have a copy of his own book, having loaned his personal annotated copy to a friend, who lost it in London. Amazed beyond belief, Hopkins pulled out the copy he'd found... and it was Feifer's!

D'OH-DAY!

As the Allies prepared to storm Europe and start kicking Nazi arse in June 1944, they had all sorts of code words to protect the secrecy of the operation. "Omaha", "Utah", "Mulberry" and "Neptune" were all hush-hush names for the landing areas and assault phases, while the entire operation was known to a select few as "Overlord". So the MI5 freaked out when all of those words appeared as answers to clues in The Daily Telegraph's crossword in the lead-up to the invasion. Allied intelligence officers pounced on word nerd compiler Leonard Dawe, thinking he was a spy. But it proved to be nothing more than a million-to-one series of coincidences.

CANNIBAL COINCIDENCE

Edgar Allan Poe's 1838 The Narrative of Arthur Gordon Pym of Nantucket includes the supposedly "true" story of a whaling ship that sinks, leaving four crewmen gradually starving in a lifeboat. Eventually the men draw lots to see who's going to be eaten — and the unlucky victim is a cabin boy named Richard Parker. Fast-forward to 1884. The yacht Mignonette leaves Southampton, England, bound for Sydney, only to sink after a fierce storm. The four crewmembers survive three weeks in a dinghy and eventually decide the weakest member of the crew would have to be tucker. Turns out the unlucky one was the 17-year-old cabin boy... named Richard Parker.

SIMULTANEOUS UNHAPPY FINNISH

In March 2002, one of a pair of 70-year-old twin Finns was riding his bike along the highway in Raahe, 600km north of Helsinki, when — blam! — he was hit by a lorry and killed. Just two hours later, and only 1.5km away, his brother was crossing the very same road on his bike when — blam-again! — he was hit and killed by a different truck.

Police officer Marja-Leena Huhtala said it wasn't likely the second twin knew of the death of the first. "It made my hair stand on end when I heard the two were brothers, and identical twins at that," she said, presumably after cleaning the poo out of her police pants. "It came to mind that perhaps someone from upstairs had a say in this."

DEAD PRESIDENTS

Both Abraham Lincoln and John F. Kennedy were shot in the head from behind on Fridays with their wives sitting beside them, and neither died instantly. Lincoln (elected 1860) was assassinated in the Ford Theater in 1863 by John Wilkes Booth, while Kennedy (elected 1960) was assassinated by Lee Harvey Oswald while riding in a Ford Lincoln in 1963. Booth shot Lincoln in a theatre and hid in a warehouse. Oswald shot Kennedy from a warehouse and hid in a theatre. After his death, Lincoln was succeeded by his vice-president, a Southern Democrat named Andrew Johnson (b 1808), while Kennedy's successor was Southern Democrat Lyndon Johnson (b 1908). Both assassins were shot before they could stand trial, leading to theories that neither had acted alone.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY

In the late 1930s, Mildred Hannebaum was the obituary writer for the Alton Evening Telegraph in Illinois, USA. She averaged writing about 10 obituaries a week. But when she decided to take a break from her job, treating herself to a fortnight's holiday, the Grim Reaper also took a vacation and not a single Alton person died over the next 14 days! Time magazine was so fascinated it wrote up the yarn under the headline "Death takes a holiday". It's not recorded if Mildred got back to work only to face an avalanche of deaths, just like the pile of work your bastard colleagues let stack up whenever you nip off for a week in Bali.

WTF ARE THE CHANCES!?

OBI WTF KENOBI

Long before he went on to play everyone's favourite crusty old Jedi, Alec Guinness was a rising star in Hollywood. On September 23, 1955, he went to a restaurant and met James Dean. Before they ate, the 24-year-old actor took them outside to admire his brand-new Porsche 550 Spyder. In his autobiography, Blessings in Disguise, Guinness recalled he was suddenly overtaken by the feeling that the car was sinister. He begged Dean to never get into it. As if speaking in a trance, he said: "It is now 10 o'clock, Friday the 23rd of September, 1955. If you get in that car you will be found dead in it by this time next week." Dean laughed and Guinness snapped out of it and apologised for acting like a complete freak. But at 6pm the following Friday, Dean died when his Spyder collided with another vehicle. Either it's the weirdest coincidence ever or Guinness really was a fking Jedi!

LARRY EMDUR!

Way back in the Jurassic year of 1992, Larry Emdur co-hosted (with Agro) a two-hour Channel 7 special called Chance and Coincidence. Amazingly enough, the Aussie media superstar himself had recently experienced an incredible turn of events! See, on his 21st birthday, Lazza was given a grey suit by his mates. Usually, the Em-Man only wore black or navy blue clobber and, having no matching grey socks, he delved into his dad's clothing drawers. There, under a grey pair of socks, Larry found an antique watch. Turns out that his old man had been given that watch on his own 21st birthday — and promptly lost it, never to see it again until Emdur Jr made his fateful rediscovery on his 21st birthday.

THE TRURO MURDERS TIMES TWO

The Truro serial killings shocked a nation. But which nation depends on which set of murders you're talking about. In 1969, Antone Charles "Tony" Costa killed and dismembered between four and eight women in and around the tiny town of Truro, Massachusetts, USA. Convicted of four murders, he wrote a novel explaining his deeds, claiming he'd worked with a man named "Carl", and killed himself in prison in 1974. But from 1976 to 1977, two Aussie nutjobs, Christopher Robin Worrell and James William Miller, turned the tiny town of Truro, South Australia, into their own hunting ground, murdering seven young women whose bodies were found in 1978-79. Worrell died in a car accident in 1977, a week after the final killing, while Miller snuffed it from cancer while behind bars in 2008.

THE KING OF BIZARRENESS

On July 27, 1900, Italy's King Umberto I went into a restaurant for a feed and discovered to his amazement the owner was his exact physical double. Even more incredible, the two men had been born on the same day in 1844 in the town of Turin, had the same name and had both married women named Margherita. The owner had opened the restaurant on the very same day Umberto ascended to the throne. The day after their meeting, King Umberto was distressed to hear the restaurant owner had been shot dead by a mysterious assailant. Moments later, the king himself was shot and killed by an assassin.

MARK TWAIN S COSMIC COMET INCIDENCE

Author Mark Twain was born on November 30, 1835, when Halley's Comet appeared on its 76-year cycle around the solar system. In 1909, at age 75, Twain said: "It is coming again next year, and I expect to go out with it. It will be the greatest disappointment of my life if I don't go out with Halley's Comet. The Almighty has said, no doubt: 'Now here are these two unaccountable freaks; they came in together, they must go out together.'" Sure enough, Twain expired on April 21, 1910, the day after the cosmic rock made its reappearance in the heavens.

Daisy's

THE UK HAS DISCOVERED A CURE FOR ERECTILE DYSFUNCTION: THE AMAZING DAISY MULLER

There's a theory that reality TV is chock-full of fame-hungry idiots who are about as entertaining as watching Sunrise with a bad hangover. And that theory is totally correct... with one exception.

Daisy Muller, a model from Birmingham, UK, is currently starring on Love Island, and her entire wardrobe seems to consist of bikinis so small they wouldn't cover a 10-cent piece.

Of course, that's just a small part of her appeal. The 24-year-old is on the record as saying non-alcoholic beer is a "sick joke", and she likes corny pick-up lines. Her favourite is, "Are you from Tennessee? Because you're the only ten I see." Other than that, what she wants in a guy is confidence, ambition "and charm — and that's it". So if you've got all that and a beer gut the size of a beach ball, you're in!

Sport

Sport's biggest FLOPS!

Some athletes get paid megabucks and earn every cent. Then there are these guys...

KWAME BROWN

He's living proof that Michael Jordan isn't good at everything to do with basketball. His Airness was behind the Washington Wizards taking Brown first in the 2001 draft, even though he was still in high school. After four crap years with the Wizards he was bounced by seven other teams, and is thought of as one of the biggest busts in NBA history.

COST CHELSEA
APPROXIMATELY
$2.26 MILLION
PER GOAL!

FERNANDO TORRES

The Spanish striker had set the Premier League on fire with Liverpool when Chelsea bought him for $102 million in 2011. Then his goals dried up in spectacular style; he netted just once in his first season with the London club, and by the time he left in 2014 he'd become a joke. Chelsea would have been better off spending the money on their ball boys.

KIMBO SLICE

Anyone who saw the US brawler smashing all comers in his brutal streetfight videos would've thought he'd be the Mike Tyson of MMA when he debuted in the Octagon in 2007. Wrong. Slice fought bums, lost to bums, and looked really, really bad doing it. Just last weekend he had a KO victory... over a 51-year-old. What's next? Kimbo bashes pensioners?

RYAN LEAF

The great debate of the 1998 NFL draft was whether Leaf or Peyton Manning should be the first pick. The Colts chose Manning, who went on to a stellar career. San Diego chose Leaf, who went on to prove his only talent was being a dick to his team and coaches, skipping practice and losing games. He retired at 26 and just got out of jail for burglary and drug offences, despite making tens of millions.

$550,000
A SEASON AND STILL GOT DROPPED TO RESERVE GRADE

CHRIS SANDOW

He burst onto the NRL scene with Souths in 2008, playing off-the-cuff footy so well that he was called the new Alfie Langer. But off-field issues and the emergence of Adam Reynolds saw Parra sign him for up to $2.2 million over four years. Big mistake. His form's been wildly inconsistent, he had a stint in rehab, and just the other week the club told him to bugger off after he publicly criticised his coach.

GRAEME HICK

In 1991 Pommy cricket experts were fawning over the Zimbabwe-born batsman, who was scoring tons at a rate only bettered by Don Bradman. Fast forward to his retirement in 2001 and the "saviour of English cricket" had a Test average of just 31.32, and struggled to retain his spot in a bad Pommy outfit for all those years. If he had a nickname it'd have to be "Mirage".

Sport's biggest FLOPS!

AUDLEY HARRISON

It's not often that a fighter becomes a millionaire before his first pro bout. That's what Harrison did when the BBC paid him $2 million to show his first 10 fights after he won gold at the 2000 Olympics. They got 10 one-sided stoushes against bozos, then Audley lost the small amount of form he had, boxed like a scared old lady, but kept saying he could win the title until his last bout in 2013.

EACH OF HIS GOALS FOR LIVERPOOL COST
MORE THAN $6M
BEFORE HE MOVED

ANDY CARROLL

What did Liverpool get for the $71.5 million they paid for him in 2011? Six goals in 44 Premier League games and about 10,000 headlines calling the striker "the top of the flops".

He was loaned to West Ham in 2012, and transferred there permanently in 2013. The Reds lost $40.8 million on him — that's enough to cover the salary cap for seven NRL clubs!

GARRICK MORGAN

At 2m tall and 122kg, Morgan was a force for the Wallabies before he defected to league in 1995 as one of the game's biggest recruits. In his first hit-up for the South Queensland Crushers he was picked up and driven by Geoff Toovey, who was 168cm and 70kg. It just got worse from there and Morgan retired mid-season after playing two games.

ANDREW FLINTOFF

The dishonour of being the Indian Premier League's biggest waste of money goes to Freddie, who cost the Chennai Super Kings almost $2 million in 2009. One of the sport's greatest all-rounders, he played just three games, scoring 62 runs and taking two wickets before a knee injury put paid to his time with the team. So that's a million per wicket, or $32,258 a run!

ALBERT PUJOLS

He's sure to make baseball's Hall of Fame. He's also 35 and on a $308 million contract that expires in 2021. Thing is, in his first 11 seasons he never hit less than 30 home runs, then his game fell off a cliff in 2013, just his second year into that amazing deal with the LA Angels. The amount they wasted on him could fix Oz's budget deficit.

BENJI MARSHALL

Train wreck. That's the best way of describing Benji's horrible stint with the Auckland Blues in rugby union. He signed a two-year deal at up to $500,000 a season, but asked for a release after starting just one game in 2014. He was so bad that even Delta Goodrem would've had more chance of cracking a spot with the All Blacks.

BRENDAN FEVOLA

Fev was one of the best full forwards in the 2000s, but also one of the AFL's loosest units. Why Brisbane took him off Carlton's hands in 2009 remains a mystery. Yes, he kicked 48 goals in his only season, but was sacked due to off-field problems. He cost the Lions about $100,000 per game!

WE DREAM OF JEANA

UK model Jeana Brock is no relation to dearly departed race god Peter Brock, but she should get an honorary Aussie citizenship anyway.

SPRAY AND WIPE

Don't mess with Jada Camio — she's a kickboxing, gym-going, freehand spray-painting babe. "I do legal graffiti and by freehand, not crappy stencils like Banksy!"

BURNIN' RUBBER

Paula Labaredas made the move to LA from Portugal and has recently released her Barbie Girl parody, Selfie Girl, which is a work of art...if you watch it on mute.

GREEN WITH ENVY

Emma Green is a Welsh model living in London. She also has 34E natural boobs. Is it creepy to say we're jealous of the cow whose skin was used to make that couch? Yep...

THE ZLIST

FILM

SCI-FI/ACTION

TERMINATOR: GENISYS [CTC]

THE GIST: John Connor (Jason Clarke) sends Kyle Reese (Jai Courtney) back to 1984 to protect his mum, Sarah Connor (Emilia Clarke, Game of Thrones). But when Reese arrives, he finds himself in a fked-up version of the past where the Guardian (Arnie) T-800 is looking after Sarah. A killer T-1000 and T-3000 stand in their way as they try to reset the future.

ZOO PREDICTS: It'd be impossible to top the first two films, but the big budget, great director (Alan Taylor, Thor: The Dark World) and tops cast should make it superior to Terminator 3 and Salvation.

BLU-RAY

SPY-FI/ACTION

KINGSMAN: THE SECRET SERVICE [MA15+]

7/10

THE GIST: A poor London youth, "Eggsy" (Taron Egerton) gets trained up by the gentlemanly Harry Hart (Colin Firth) to help stop a lisp tech billionaire (Samuel L. Jackson) from wiping out most of humanity.

ZOO SAYS: Not your typical spy movie, this stylish effort has a brutal fight scene in a church and an anal sex reference as its finale.

ACTION

BATMAN: ARKHAM KNIGHT

PS4, XB1, PC

9/10

THE GIST: The Dark Knight returns for one last hurrah with the original developers. Joker's dead and Scarecrow has united the villains and terrorised Gotham, causing a citywide evacuation. We can drive the Batmobile for the very first time and biffing crowds of goons is bat-tastic! ZOO SAYS: This is one kick-arse action game, capping off an amazing quadrilogy with a big bat-shaped explosion. The next-gen graphics look sweet and no city corner in this open world is the same. Driving challenges, detective work, gliding, brawls, stealth and gadget toys are a mad play!

ACTION

DEVIL MAY CRY 4: SPECIAL EDITION

XB1, PS4

6/10

THE GIST: The last game of the action-packed series, where Dante the demon slayer displayed his shiny silver locks like a slow-mo shampoo TV commercial, gets a next-gen remaster. But no amount of Pro-Vitamin B5 can rescue this game, which nosedived the series into shrugsville on previous-gen consoles.

ZOO SAYS: The combat moves may have some guts to 'em, but there's way too many snooze-worthy cut scenes and copy-and-pasted levels, which you'll find yourself retreading over and over. It does look improved on the next-gen consoles and we enjoyed the new playable characters: Vergil, Trish and Lady.

DON'T MISS THIS WEEK*TOUR DE FRANCE

SBS, SATURDAY JULY 4, 10PM

The channel known for its raunchy foreign films will present all 21 stages of the 2015 Tour de France live. There will also be morning and evening highlight recaps, and stage replays every day. This year's Giro d'Italia winner Alberto Contador will battle 2014 champ Vincenzo Nibali and Aussie Richie Porte.

I think I'm getting piles...

INDIE/ALT ROCK

WOLF ALICE

MY LOVE IS COOL

8/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Mostly sung by frontwoman Ellie Rowsell (guitarist Joff Oddie nails Swallowtail), the tracks glide from '90s grunge/shoegaze through to The xx-style dream-pop.

ZOO SAYS: It's hard to keep track of all the buzz bands these days, but these North Londoners live up to the hype on their debut.

INDIE

TRICK

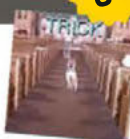

5/10

SOUNDS LIKE:

Alex G is a young Philadelphia-based muso attracting bulk indie fans with his high-pitched voice, lo-fi guitar, strange tunings and whimsical lyrics.

ZOO SAYS: Like the soundtrack to a hipster teen romance movie, Trick isn't bad, but it's not for us.

INDIE FOLK

JUAN WAUTERS

WHO ME?

3/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Mostly sung in English, with a couple of songs in Spanish, this is the most basic, bland acoustic music you could imagine. Originally from Uruguay, but now living in Queens, USA, Juan Waters looks like Borat's long-lost cousin. Hipsters have embraced his ironic goofiness and lo-fi ramblings.

ZOO SAYS: Trendy sites have been falling over themselves proclaiming their love of Juan — Spin called this "one of the year's best albums" and Pitchfork gave it the same score as the new Faith No More. It's a sad state of affairs...

POST HARDCORE

THE GETAWAY PLAN

DARK HORSES

7/10

SOUNDS LIKE: After hitting the big time with their 2008 debut, this Melbourne four-piece have weathered the storm of break up, reformation and controversy. What didn't kill them seems to have made them stronger, 'cos album three is a masterfully produced and performed record.

The emotive vocals, keys, grandiose strings and electronic elements give this an epic stadium-rock feel. ZOO SAYS: Newcomers might not dig the emo vocals and odd shit lyric, but fans will love it.

METAL

CAUTERIZE

1/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Alter Bridge guitarist Mark Tremonti shreds and sings on his second solo album, and is joined by Eddie Van Halen's son on bass. ZOO SAYS: If you can ignore the fact that Tremonti used to be in Creed, this is pretty kick-arse.

ABOUT...

PRESIDENT TRUMP

Walking toupee and reality show moron Donald Trump has announced he's running for US Prez

1 After flirting with the idea in 1988, 2000 and 2012, billionaire nitwit and hotelier Trump has declared his candidacy for the 2016 race — joining 11 other (so far) Republican candidates — in a stirring speech at Trump Tower

2 He wants to “build a great wall on our southern border and have Mexico pay for that wall”, saying of Mexicans, “They’re bringing drugs. They’re bringing crime. They’re rapists. And some, I assume, are good people.” But he likes China: “I just sold an apartment for $15m to somebody from China”

3 Other gems from his announcement speech include: “I will be the greatest jobs president that God ever created”, “I’m really rich”, “Our real unemployment is 18 to 20 per cent, don’t believe their 5.6 per cent”, and “we’re dying, we’re dying, we need money and the right people”.

4 Trump’s poll figures of 3.6 per cent mean he’ll join nine other candidates in TV debates

5 He has to prove his claimed wealth of US$9bn in assets is true by mid-October, after the first two debates. Forbes has his net holdings valued at US$4.1bn

6 The Democrats say of Trump, “He brings some much-needed seriousness that has previously been lacking from the GOP field, and we look forward to hearing more about his ideas for the nation”. Sarcastic much?
